

Author Christine Lavin's "Cold Pizza For Breakfast: A Mem-Wha"
Book Reading/Knit-in At "Bella Filati" a Luxury Yarn Shop
Southern Pines, North Carolina August 2, 2010

Photo credits: Alison Ives

In the photo above, Ms. Lavin is reading Chapter 25, "If I Didn't Have To Play Guitar Right Now, I'd Be Knitting Too."

From left to right: Meade Gelston, Priscilla Johnson, Janet Kenworthy, Christine Lavin, Holly Floyd (owner), Pat Jarusinski, Margaret Giordano, Sandra Eriksson, and Suzann Schenkel.

Christine Lavin read to the knitters the tale of Ervin Drake and how his future wife Edith inspired his immortal song, "Good Morning Heartache" the first time he proposed to her (she said no; 34 years later he asked again). Then, the author called Ervin and Edith on my cell phone and they gave immortal love tips to the happy knitters who couldn't believe they got to a book reading, a mini-concert, and love tips as they knitted away.

The bookseller for this event was Bonnie Johnson of The Country Book Store. She purchased from Ingram. And any books left they will sell back at the store.

A wonderful yarn shop! A great collaboration between publisher Tell Me Press, author, bookseller and retailer (with great thanks to the creativity of Poetry In Motion and author/artist, Christine Lavin.)

